

Resources at the Library

The library itself is a great resource for anyone looking into starting or improving a small business! We have private study rooms, a larger conference room that can be booked in advance, printing, copying, scanning, and faxing services, and free Wi-Fi. We also have a variety of books relevant to small business owners, which are marked with our new Business Center spine label, and access to databases such as AtoZ Databases, Demographics Now, and Gale Small Business Resource Center, which can provide valuable information on business leads and in-field research!

is back!

JobNow

JobNow is a website with a huge variety of career resources, including resume help, interview tips, career assessments, and more! JobNow's Skill Surfer section has a variety of training courses on different useful skills, ranging from basic math to GRE test prep to all levels of computer skills. They also offer live help with developing all of these skills. JobNow can be accessed from the Palm Harbor Library's computers or anywhere with your Palm Harbor library card! You can find it on palmharborlibrary.org under the EResources tab.

SBDC Consulting with Kurt Forster

Starting in April, the library will offer appointments with Kurt Forster from Pinellas County Economic Development and Small Business Development Center for one-on-one small business consultation sessions. He will be available for one-hour meetings on the second Wednesday of every month. Just ask at the reference desk to see what appointment slots are available!

SCORE Seminars and Webinars

In March, the library will begin offering workshops from Pinellas County SCORE, a non-profit organization that offers mentoring and advice to people interested in starting and maintaining small businesses. The workshops will cover a variety of business-related topics, such as working from home, startups, retirement planning, and more. Some will be conducted in-person, while others will take place via Zoom. Check with the reference desk to see what workshops are coming up and register to join!
